RATING RATIONALE

Current Rating Rationale: The rating reflects the property/casualty group's superior capitalization, favorable post-merger integration progress, the positive implications of its extraordinary year-end reserving actions and favorable earnings prospects. Further, the merger of the US holding companies of CGU plc, Commercial Union Corp. and General Accident Corp. of America has considerably bolstered the group's personal and standard commercial lines competitive market position, enhanced its geographic diversification and secured leading market participations within its core independent agent distribution channels. The merger also provided the worldwide group with increased product and geographic diversification, as well as the potential for significant expense savings through integration initiatives.

A.M. Best also acknowledges CGU-U.S.'s standing as a core and integral operation of CGU plc, U.K., whose financial strength rating is on par with that of its substantial global parent organization. The global group—the largest U.K. general/life insurer and one of the top five European insurers—maintains a superior global market profile, strong balance sheet and considerable financial flexibility. Its operating performance is expected to improve dramatically in 1999 and approach A.M. Best's standards for Superior-rated companies, since sizable merger-related integration charges and extraordinary reserve additions are not expected to recur.

CGU's ultimate parent demonstrated its commitment by infusing $425 million into the U.S. group at year-end, which helped offset its extraordinary reserve charges. The U.S. group bolstered its A&E reserves to an ultimate basis following a vigorous ground-up exposure analysis and also increased General Accident's core reserves to more conservative levels in line with the group's more conservative reserving practices. As a result, CGU-U.S.'s year-over-year surplus remained very stable in the $3.3 billion range, and future operating performance is expected to improve in the absence of several points of historical A&E earnings drag. CGU-U.S.'s 1998 combined ratio of 128.1% includes 21 points of nonrecurring reserve development, but its underlying results remain strong. More importantly, future earnings will more accurately reflect the true earnings power of the new organization as it operates from a position of reserve strength, unlocks expense savings to reduce its above-average expense ratio and manages its susceptibility to frequent but limited severe weather-related losses. CGU-U.S. maintains the strength and stability of a national company with the focus, presence and high-quality service of a regional carrier. The group markets a portfolio of personal, commercial and specialty products nationally and ranks among the top 15 largest domestic property/casualty groups, with more than $4 billion in net writings. The rating applies to the 13 pool members, led by General Accident Insurance Company of America, and seven reinsured affiliates. The rating is based on the consolidation of these 20 companies and six regional companies that are under the direction of the same management as the pool participants.
